DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

The following is a quotation of the first paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall contain a written description of the invention, and of the manner and process of making and using it, in such full, clear, concise, and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and use the same and shall set forth the best mode contemplated by the inventor of carrying out his invention.

Claims 27,32 and 34 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the enablement requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to enable one skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and/or use the invention. The term "resale channel" is not described in the specification in such a way as to enable one of ordinary skill in the art to make and/or use the invention. While it is mentioned in the specification, it is not described and therefore there is no way to understand what is meant by the term.

Note: For examination purposes it will be assumed that the "resale channel" is who is selling the vehicle.

Claims 33-42 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as containing subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to enable one skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and/or use the invention. The formulae in claims 33,35 and 36 are incomplete. While they list variables to be used, they do not explain how to use the variables, as there is no mention in the specification as to how to combine the variables to achieve the stated results, there is no way to use these claims.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. Code not included in this action can be found in a prior Office action.

Claims 23-41, as best understood, are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over N.A.D.A. web page from 11/1999. (NADA)

NADA discloses a method for determining a vehicle's price which includes checking historical values for cars (paragraph 2 on page 1) and using this to generate values for autos. While they don't specifically mention adjusting for error, this would be inherent. It is further inherent in the NADA that they user compares the values in the book to a similar car. There are factors listed that increase and decrease the value of the auto, including; high mileage, low mileage, automatic or standard transmission, air conditioning, sound system, power accessories, region, sun/moon roof, spoiler, alloy wheels et al. NADA is generally regarded as one of the best sources for automobile prices because they have a low error and as such are used in many automobile dealerships as a guide to the value of used cars for trade-ins. They further compare comparable vehicles for their prices and adjust the prices for other vehicles, they have a price for average and then list prices for clean, rough and further list a wholesale price. These values would be distance weighted from the average price. The NADA book further is region-specific and thus, there would be the ability to determine distance between autos.

Application/Control Number: 09/607,069

Response to Arguments

As to arguments in relation to the term "resale channel" in claims 27,32 and 34, while the term is in the specification, it is not defined, merely stated. As to arguments involving the formulae in claims 33,35 and 36, they are not complete. Further, the applicant remarks that "(please note the variables v1 and v2 are used in a different context than claim 33)". This would appear to reinforce the examiner's arguments that the formulae are unclear as there are acknowledged by applicant different uses for the same variables. This, coupled with vague references to using variables in a formula without explaining the exact formula, would make the claims unclear and indefinite. Further, applicant lists two Errors, p and k, without explaining how to compute the error. Thus, there is no enablement. As to applicant's arguments that the NADA book does not disclose certain criteria, such as number "K" of vehicles, the examiner has asserted and still asserts that these criteria are inherent. The number of cars in the database would be "K", whether specifically labeled or not. As previously recited by the examiner, the NADA book is issued in various regions of the country and is used exclusively in those areas. A book from the West Coast would not be used in the Northeast.
